

Mokena Man Heldup And Robbed of $78

James Raffauf of Mokena was held up at the junction of Wolf road and the Lincoln highway Monday night and robbed of $78 in cash, a ring, a wrist watch and his overcoat.

Mr. Raffauf who is employed in the Fred Walsh Real Estate office in Joliet was driving home in his car and reached the Mokena road about 5:30 p. m. He saw a Pontiac sedan parked part way across the Wolf road and as he attempted to drive around the car, the car started up and forced his car off the road into a ditch. At the same time a bandit said to have been 6 feet tall and weighing approximately 200 pounds jumped on the running board of Mr. Raffauf's car and covering him with a revolver forced him out of the car and ordered him to throw up his hands. After taking the money, the bandit forced a ring with an amethyst setting from one of Mr. Raffauf's fingers and in so doing injured the finger. Then the bandit took the wrist watch and then forced Mr. Raffauf to part with his overcoat. The bandit did not want to leave his victim without money, so he handed Mr. Raffauf 50 cents. The bandit then joined his accomplice in the waiting car and they turned west on Lincoln highway. Soon as Mr. Raffauf reached home he notified the office of Sheriff Oliver Flint in Joliet of the hold up, but no trace of the bandits was found. There have been a number of holdups at this corner and persons travelling had better be on the lookout for holdups at any time. The highway is not patrolled and there is no protection afforded against holdups.

A number of years ago Dr. E. G. MacMahon of Mokena was held up at this corner and robbed of his car and in the effort to capture the bandit, former deputy Walter Fisher of Mokena was shot and killed in a gun duel with the bandit.

Mokena Garden Club News

Mrs. W. C. Lowe, Pub. Chairman

The Mokena Garden Club met Tuesday Dec. 6. Mrs. Tooley, Club President opened the meeting with a sincere wish to all club members for a Merry Xmas and a Happy New Year. The regular business order proceeded.

A discussion on flower show exhibiting resulted with all members in favor of the Mokena Garden club putting on a major exhibit at the annual flower show in Chicago in the spring of 1933.

Tickets will be sold by the Club at a reduction. Date of sale of tickets will be announced later.

Our regular Program Chairman, Mrs. Balaz, being indisposed, Mrs. A. Braun took charge of program.

December Lesson, This is the preserving month in most localities. Look well to the trimming of all native trees and shrubs and the cultivated varieties. This should be carefully done. As in other things there is a right and wrong way to do the work. It is possible to carry out the above program in its entirety but one or two outstanding projects taken from each month's outline will if properly developed rebound to the glory of the cause.

Remember that America will be what we want it to be. Reading "Sweet Herbs in the Xmas Wreath" by Mrs. A. Braun. The article on "The care of Xmas plants" furnished many helpful ideas for the club members.

Surprise packages were awarded to all members thru the courtesy of Mrs. Braun and Mrs. Tooley. Club members were all happy to hear that our lesson chairman and co-worker, Mrs. O. A. Bartels is recovering from a major operation. Anyone wishing to read the article on "Spring Sown Herbs for Winter Beauty" can obtain the May issue of Horticulture from Mrs. Albert Braun. The Mokena Garden Club members are always ready to hand out propaganda on garden helps to anyone interested in gardening. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Rose Bechstein.

Mokena Board Makes Reduction In License Fees

In keeping with general cuts in various lines due to the hard times prevailing all over the nation, the Mokena village board at their meeting Tuesday night of this week made drastic cuts in the various special license fees in effect in the village.

Amendments were passed cutting down the license fees as follows:

Special license fees on cigars, tobacco, etc., cut from $15 to $10 per year; ice cream cut from $15 to $10; garages cut from $15 to $10; candy cut from $10 to $5; automobile licenses cut from $5 per year to $3 per year; motorcycle licenses cut from $3 to $2 per year. The new vehicle licenses go into effect January 1st and all these licenses must be paid within 60 days and all those persons who cannot afford to pay for their vehicle license by that time are to report to the village board and show why they cannot do so and the board will consider installment arrangements or else give such persons a chance to do road jobs in the spring and give them an opportunity to work out their license fee.

The other special licenses became effective October first and all those business people who paid the old rate will be given a refund on the new rate. The amendments bear no date limit and can be changed back to the old rate at any time by the passing of amendments to that effect.

Condemnation Case Wolf Rd. Set for Dec. 19

The dispute regarding the Wolf road right of way thru the C. M. Cleveland farm south of Mokena which has been hanging fire and delaying the paving of Wolf road from the Hickory Creek bridge south of Mokena to the Lincoln highway, will come to a court hearing on December 19th at 10 a. m., when the condemnation case of Will County against C. M. Cleveland for a right of way thru his farm will be tried before Judge Ralph Austin in the Will County court.

Mr. Cleveland has opposed the location of the Wolf road right of way on a straight line thru his farm from the time the route was first surveyed in 1929. He objects chiefly on the ground that valuable trees would be destroyed and that the location of the road on a straight line would be dangerous for the school children attending the Cleveland school on the north side of the Lincoln highway across from the Cleveland home.

Attorney Robert Martin is handling the case for the county while Mr. Cleveland is being represented by attorney Wm. D. Heise. Emil Johnson, the tenant on the Cleveland farm has also been named in the condemnation suit and is represented by attorney Edward Nadelhoffer of Joliet.

STATE CAPITOL NEWS

Hiram L. Williamson,
Illinois Press Association, Editor

The Illinois senate completed the passage of the legislative program for the relief of the idle of the state. It passed the Igoe bill authorizing Cook county to issue $17,000,000 in relief bonds and the Tice optional county sales tax bill.

This action marked what is considered the actual windup of the fourth special session of the general assembly. The technical sine die adjournment may not come until late in December but no further legislation is looked for because of the difficulty of obtaining attendance sufficient for the two-thirds vote required for emergency measures.

Bids will be received by the state division of highway on November 30 for the construction of 133.58 miles of concrete pavement, 1.29 miles of gravelled roadway, 22.22 miles of grading and 20 bridge sections, according to Frank T. Sheets, chief highway engineer. A considerable portion of the paving work is to be done in Bureau, Ogle, Macoupin, Iroquois, Sangamon, Madison, Knox and Fayette counties, the longest stretch of contemplated pavement being 11.23 miles on route 185 in Fayette county.

The coal mines of Illinois added 9,342 men to their pay rolls during October, and production increased almost one million tons over the September output, the monthly coal report of the state department of mines and minerals reveals.

County fairs of Illinois will get about seventy cents on the dollar of their claims for state aid as premium reimbursement for 1932. The officers and directors of the Illinois Association of Agricultural Fairs, in conference at Springfield recently with Stuart E. Pierson, director of the state department of agriculture, made this calculation known upon the basis of the premiums that the fairs have paid and the balance available in the appropriation for this purpose from the state.

The route of the Lincoln Memorial highway through Illinois has been decided upon, Director Harry H. Cleaveland of the department of public works and buildings has announced. From Vincennes, Ind., the road will run through Russellville, Palestine, West Union, Marshall, Westfield, Charleston, Janesville, Paradise, Mattoon, Allenville, Livingston, Mt. Zion, Elvin, Decatur, on route 10 to Springfield, Bradfordton, Old Salem State park, Petersburg, Oakford, Chandler-ville and Beardstown.

With the emergency relief bond issue approved by the voters by a large majority, preparations will be made as soon as the count is official to sell the bonds. The proceeds will be used to retire $18,750,000 of relief notes issued by the state. The bonds will be of twenty-year duration. The interest and principal is to be retired over this period by withholding from each county's share of the state gasoline tax a proportionate amount based on the relief each county received.

State Auditor Oscar Nelson has instructed 203 bank receivers of Illinois to list the assets of the institutions preparatory to possible application for reconstruction finance corporation loans. The loans are made possible under an amendment to the banking act which was approved by the people at the general election last week.

Illinois produced a bumper corn crop this year. The November 1 crop report of the state and federal department of agriculture says the corn yield of 42.5 bushels per acre averaged higher than for any year since records were started in 1866.

Water treatment plant operators from numerous Illinois cities gathered in Springfield on November 16 for the third water purification conference to gain instruction on how to provide purer water for their localities as cheaply as possible. The conference was called by the division of sanitary engineering of the state department of public health and is sponsored also by the Southern and Central Illinois Water Purification Plant Operators association and the Illinois section of the American Water Works association.

J. Paul Kuhn, Batavia, member of the Illinois Commerce commission, has been elected president of the National Association of Railroads and Utilities commissioners at its recent annual meeting at Hot Springs, Ark.

John D. Lentz of Hillsboro was killed when his automobile left the road and crashed into a telephone pole.

Fatal automobile accidents in Illinois during September were off 20 per cent as compared with the same month of 1931, according to statistics made public by the state department of public health. The actual number of deaths from this cause was 184 against 233 in September of 1931, while the death rate per 100,000 motor vehicles licensed in the state was 12 in September of this year compared with 16 in that month of 1931.

STORY FOR THE LITTLE FOLKS

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

PETER SURPRISES HIS FRIENDS

THE Merry Little Breezes of Old Mother Westwind were tired of playing alone. "Let's go to play with Striped Chipmunk!" cried one. No sooner was it proposed than away they raced across the Green Meadows up to the old stone wall on the edge of the old Orchard nearest to the Green Forest. It did not take them long to find Striped Chipmunk. He was racing along the old wall as if his life depended on it.

"Come play with us!" shouted the Merry Little Breezes, dancing around Striped Chipmunk.

"Too busy. Too much to do," mumbled Striped Chipmunk, for his cheeks were stuffed with nuts so that he could hardly speak at all. With that he whisked out of sight between the stones of the old wall. Presently he was out again scampering back toward the Green Forest. The Merry Little Breezes raced along with him, teasing him to play, but he merely snapped his bright eyes at them and repeated that he was too busy; and this was all they could get out of him.

The same thing happened when they tried to get Chatterer the Red Squirrel to play and again when they hunted up Happy Jack the Gray Squirrel. Johnny Chuck couldn't stop stuffing himself long enough to play. He said that it was almost time for him to go to sleep for the winter, and he simply must get a little more fat to take him through. Bobby Coon and Uncle Billy Possum were asleep in their hollow trees. Prickly Porky the Porcupine never would play, anyway, so it was of no use to look for him. Paddy the Beaver was hard at work cutting a supply of wood on the shore of his pond deep in the Green Forest and sinking it near his house, where he could get it in the winter when the pond was frozen over. He said that this was no time for playing and refused to stop working even to talk. Jerry Muskrat down in the Smiling

Harry Newman has been the first string quarterback of the strong University of Michigan team this season and has proved himself one of the best players in the Western conference.

Pool was just as busy. Even the birds which had not already started for the faraway Southland were too busy making up parties for the long journey.

"There isn't anyone who will play with us," said one of the Merry Little Breezes disconsolately.

"Yes, there is!" cried another.

"Who?" shouted all the others.

"Peter Rabbit," was the reply. "Peter never works. He always is ready to play."

So the Merry Little Breezes raced over to the dear Old Briar Patch to look for Peter. But Peter wasn't there. Mrs. Peter said that he had gone over to the Green Forest. Back to the Green Forest raced the Merry Little Breezes. They know all of Peter's favorite places over there and they hadn't a doubt that they would find him. Straight to a certain bramble-tangle they hurried to Peter.

"Hello, Peter!" they shouted gleefully. "Come play with us!"

"Can't," replied Peter. "I'm too busy."

The Merry Little Breezes looked at one another as if they couldn't believe their own ears. Whenever before had Peter Rabbit been too busy to play?

"That's a joke!" they cried, and laughed merrily. "Come on, Peter! It's a splendid day for a romp. We'll play hide-and-seek and tag and anything else you want to."

"It's a splendid day to work, too," replied Peter, "and I've too much to do to play." Peter was trudging at a big bramble which he had cut off to get it out of one of his private little paths.

Once more the Little Breezes couldn't believe their own ears. Peter Rabbit working! Whoever heard of such a thing?

"You don't really mean that," ventured one of the Little Breezes.

"I certainly do," retorted Peter. "I've cleared all the brambles out of my paths in the dear Old Briar Patch, and now I've got to clear them out of my private paths over here so that when I need to use them in a hurry there will be nothing in the way. Besides, I'm going to cut a few new paths. You know there is nothing like being prepared. You ought to do a little work yourselves. You've no idea how interesting it is and how it makes the time fly." With this Peter turned his back on the Merry Little Breezes and began to cut another bramble.

The Merry Little Breezes looked at one another, then with one accord they raced away to spread the news that Peter Rabbit was working and refused to play, for they knew it would be the most surprising thing Peter's friends had heard for many a day.

EACH STEP WILL TELL

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

WE SELDOM face a precipice Where we must choose the right or wrong.

'Tis not as simple as all this— Then even weaklings would be strong.

Life is a path we walk along, The path an easy one to miss, No crimson light, no sounding gong, To warn us of some great abyss.

No, step by step we rise or fall, And hardly know we fall or rise; Each hour directions must recall, And watch the way with open eyes. Below the valley always lies, But they who think to see a wall That separates the earth and skies Will never find it so at all.

There never was a major sin Without a minor ere we fell, Some compromise, some giving in, Surrender of some principle. No, we must watch the path, and well,

The depths to pass, the heights to win; Each hour will say, each step will tell—

We are what we have always been.

GOOD SAUCES

A WELL-MADE sauce, smooth, nicely seasoned, will add much to any dish of meat or vegetables.

Often a good white sauce for a foundation may be used with chopped hard-cooked egg, lobster, or cooked mushrooms, parsley, or various other flavor foods, to make a most tasty sauce.

Onion Sauce.

Melt three tablespoonfuls of butter, add four tablespoonfuls of flour, and two of finely chopped onions. Cook until light brown, then add one-half cupful of good stock, stirring constantly. Mix one teaspoonful each of sugar, made mustard, and tarragon vinegar; add while the sauce is boiling.

German Sauce.

Put three tablespoonfuls of butter into a saucepan with a sprig of parsley finely chopped, add four good-sized tomatoes with seeds removed, or the equivalent of canned tomato. Season with salt and pepper, add one-half cupful of water and bring to the boiling point. Serve with roast meats.

Dutch Sauce.

Put the yolks of two eggs with four tablespoonfuls of butter, one-half cupful of water, salt and nutmeg to season, and mix thoroughly. Do not boil, but simmer until thick, over hot water. Remove from the fire, add a tablespoonful of lemon juice and serve with fish or calves head.

Why Nations Are Eager to Locate "Sarah Ann"

Two countries are searching for Sarah Ann, an island in American waters just north of the equator. Once it was marked on all the maps, now it seems to have disappeared. America has ordered her Pacific fleet to make a search for it, and Germany is likely to send a search party as well.

Sarah Ann has suddenly become important because scientists have worked out that the little island, if it still exists, is the only place from where astronomers can properly view the total eclipse of the sun which is to take place in 1937. The position of the island lies almost in the direct path of the eclipse, and there is no land anywhere near it where a suitable observation station can be set up.

The 1937 eclipse will last 7 minutes. The longest an eclipse can last is 7 minutes 30 seconds. So astronomers—especially the Germans, who are deeply interested—hope to make exceptional observations with the comparatively long time at their disposal in 1937. But they will work under immense difficulties—unless Sarah Ann can be found.

One Sure Way to End Coughs and Colds

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action: it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (Adv.)

FROM THE BEGINNING

At his fur post, Sunset House, in the Canadian north, Jim Stuart, trader in charge, with his headman, Omar, rescues a girl from an overturned canoe in the lake. She is Aureole LeBlond, daughter of Stuart's rival in the fur business, and proves to be a charming companion. In a spirit of fun, she and Jim arrange to exchange notes on a certain island. LeBlond, with Paradis, his half-breed lieutenant, arrives in search of the missing girl. Paradis displays enmity toward Jim, though LeBlond acknowledges his debt of gratitude. Going to the island to see if Aureole has left the promised note, Jim is ambushed by Paradis and forced to travel toward the LeBlond post. On the way he overthrusts the boat, leaving his half-breed enemy on the beach. Jim discusses plans with his superior, Andrew Christie. Displeased at the trade showing made Christie allows Stuart, at his request, one year to "make good." He leaves the post feeling he has been unjustly treated.

Two days later, with Smoke running the shore, Jim and Omar were poling the paterboru up a wild reach of the swift Woman river. Jim's thoughts alternated between the coming year which would decide his future with the company, and the two women, far apart as the poles in nature and temperament, who had come into his life. As for Aureole LeBlond, she would soon be but a memory. In a month she was going "out"—back to Winnipeg. There was no chance of even seeing her again, as he was to start with Omar and Esau at once for the Pipe-stone country.

The canoe was entering a stretch of "strong water" demanding the utmost efforts of the crew to force her upstream when, suddenly, a rifle exploded in the willows of the near shore and a bullet splintered the spruce pole in Omar's hands. Off balance, the bowman lunged into the river, but twisted as he fell and caught and hung to the gunwale of the boat while Jim threw his weight against the roll of the swinging craft.

"Lie down! Let her dreef!" called the half-breed as a rifle again cracked in the willows and a splinter from the gunwale flicked Jim's desperate face with blood.

Flattening out in the canoe, he groped for his gun lying amidst the debris of the man in the water headed the bow down river. Again a rifle exploded and a bullet passed through the wooden wall of the craft close to Jim's head.

What could it mean? Who would ambush them here on the Woman river?

As the boat drifted out of easy range of the willows, Jim reached and cocked his gun, rose boldly to his knees and rapidly emptied the magazine at the telltale wisp of smoke against the green of the scrub. Then over the bow rose a dripping face warped with rage as the thick arms of Omar lifted his body from the water. With a lunge the half-breed was in the rolling canoe and his rifle firing at the fast receding shore.

Shortly a bend masked the willows from the sight of the dancing craft and the men swung the canoe in to the beach.

"Well, what's this mean?" demanded Jim.

"Paradees, for sure!" snapped the bowman as they landed. "Come on, we hunt for dem!" And Omar plunged ahead into the bush.

They had traveled less than a hundred yards when a familiar yelp, from somewhere upstream, sounded above the fret of the river.

"Smoke! He'll find their trail!" muttered Jim. Then fear for the safety of the dog he loved led him to push rapidly on up the river shore while Omar cut back inland behind the scene of the ambush.

Suddenly, deep in the forest, a rifle was fired and Jim's heart sank, as he heard the husky's yelp.

"He's shot Smoke!"

Furious with the thought of his gallant dog gasping out his life from a bullet wound, Jim plunged ahead in the direction of the rifle shot. Shortly he saw a dark patch through the spruce and threw his rifle to his shoulder. As he lined his sights, the dark face of Omar appeared, head tilted as if listening.

Jim reached his friend's side. "Did you fire that shot? Where's Smoke?" he demanded. "I thought he was hurt."

"I shoot at dat feller! Smoke's after him now—in dose cedar. It ees so tick you see noding."

"You saw him?"

"Ah-hah!"

Separating, the two men started circling the dense cedar growth. Jim had not traveled a hundred yards when he heard Smoke's roar, followed by a shot, then the sounds of a struggle. Plunging through the thick undergrowth, mad with anxiety for the safety of his dog, he saw a running figure turn and swing with clubbed rifle at the black-and-white bulk of the pursuing Smoke. With a muffled roar the hurt dog again lunged at the Indian; again the clubbed rifle crashed as the husky leaped. Knocked back to his haunches, with a shake of the head the great dog closed with the Indian, who was desperately trying to load as he ran. The tusks of Smoke snapped as his one hundred and forty pounds bore his quarry to the earth.

Throwing himself on the enraged dog, Jim balked the lunge which would have torn the throat of the helpless man on the ground, then dragged the battle-mad Smoke from his prey.

"Throw that knife away or I'll let him have you!" Jim commanded, holding the straining husky as the Ojibwa, rolling away from the snapping fangs, reached for the sheath on his sash. "Now lie where you are! If that shot hit him, I'll put him on you, anyway." But there was no sign of blood on Smoke's trembling body.

Then Omar, drawn by the shot, reached them.

"Ah-hah! So Paradees sen' you? Wal, I tink we camp here tonight wile you tell w'at you know 'bout M'sieu' Paradees, ah-hah!"

With the Indian walking ahead, prodded by Omar's gun, they returned to the canoe and made camp.

Supper over, Omar began the inquisition of the sullen Ojibwa who had remained dumb to all attempts to make him talk. Lighting his pipe, the half-breed freshened the fire, then squatted beside the prisoner, whose feet were pinioned with raw-hide, and said quietly in Ojibwa: "You have woman and children?"

The milk-like eyes of the Indian shot a furtive glance at the lined visage of the man who squinted into the fire. Jim watched with curiosity the drama the wily Omar was staging. Then he mumbled a faint, "Enh-eh! yes."

"If you wish to see the Lake of the Sand Beaches again, you speak with a single tongue," went on the inquisitor in Ojibwa, as if talking to himself, his eyes still fixed on the fire. "You lie to me, now!" Omar suddenly stormed, turning a face distorted with passion on his man, as his iron fingers gripped the Indian's throat, "and I'll feed your heart to the ravens!"

The cowed prisoner flinched from the steel point of Omar's knife which pricked his chest.

"You speak with a split tongue and the wolves will pick your bones!" Omar's left hand closed on the Indian's throat till the terror-haunted eyes of the gasping man protruded from his gray face. Then the half-breed abruptly released him, replaced his skinning knife in its sheath, and resumed his silent contemplation of the fire.

Fascinated by the drama, Jim watched the two across the fire from behind a screen of tobacco smoke.

"You lak' to see de sun rise once more?" The stiff lips of Omar scarcely moved as he rasped out the question in English. But the prisoner was silent.

Again the impassive Omar, gazing into the burning birch, was transformed into a fury as he suddenly turned with a snarl on the Ojibwa. "What did Paradees pay you?"

Flinching from the knotted visage of his tormentor, the prisoner nevertheless stoically held his silence.

After a period of motionless contemplation of the fire, the half-breed rose and, taking his ax, stripped a neighboring spruce sapling of its branches. Then he gathered an armful of dry spruce sticks and birchbark and dropped the kindling at the foot of the tree.

Jim glanced at the Ojibwa. Horror filled the Indian's eyes as he watched the deliberate preparations for the last act of the drama.

Going to his pack, Omar produced some rawhide thongs, then picking up the visibly shaking prisoner as if he were a child, carried him to the spruce and, binding his arms, lashed him to the tree, and calmly pushed the spruce kindlings around his feet.

But gray as was the face of Omar's victim, on which stood out great beads of sweat, his stiff lips emitted no sound as his hopeless eyes watched the half-breed lift a red coal between two birch sticks and calmly approach the tree.

"You talk now?" grunted the executioner.

Slowly the dry lips of the Indian moved. "He let dem starve—dees long snow," he moaned, in English.

"Paradees sen' you?" demanded Omar, dropping the coal into the kindlings.

"Eef I spik he drive dem alone into de bush—to starve."

The bark and spruce sticks ignited. The red flames licked slowly toward the feet of the man bound to the tree. Before him, arms folded across his deep chest, waited the implacable Omar.

"Paradees sen' you?" came the reiterated question.

The burning sticks snapped at the feet of the fainting man who fought with his fear. Then, as the heat reached his legs, his nerve crumpled. "W'at you do eef I spik?" he whimpered.

"You spik all de trick an' we let you go!" came the true answer.

"I spik," murmured the Indian and fainted where he stood.

With vigorous kicks Omar and Jim scattered and stamped out the fire, then unbound the Indian and doused his face with water while he blinked doubtfully at them from where he lay.

"Paradees sen' you?" repeated the pitiless inquisitor.

The man sitting on the ground nodded.

"LeBlond, he know dis?"

The prisoner shook his head. "On-lee Paradees."

"How he mak' you do dis t'ing?"

"My familie."

The Indian rapidly explained in Ojibwa that two poor winters and a broken leg had put him heavily in debt to the North-West company for supplies. They had already refused him further "debt" when Paradis had come to him in his desperation and offered to put him on his feet if he would ambush the returning canoe of Jim and Omar, whom MacLauren had met on the portage.

A grim smile widened Omar's stiff mouth. "I go to dis LeBlond, ah-hah. But you go wid me."

"He weel keel me, dis Paradees, eef you tell dem what I spik to you," protested the other.

Then it was arranged that the Indian, whose canoe was hidden up river, should return at once to LeBlond's and bring his family to Sunset House, where Jim would outfit them for the winter. Following this, Jim and Omar secretly decided to take the Indian to LeBlond's and face Paradis. They could count on Pierre Migwan, their prisoner, deserting Paradis and bringing his family to Sunset House, for he would not dare show his face again at the post across the lake, once Paradis learned he had been betrayed. But it would take some urging to get the Indian in the face of Paradis to repeat his story to LeBlond. Yet that was what the friends intended to make him do. LeBlond's head man had been accessory before the fact to an attempt at murder. This LeBlond could not ignore, for Jim would notify Christie at once and a canoe of the Provincial police would appear in September. At last the luck of Sunset House had turned and they would make the most of it.

CHAPTER IV

Jim Stuart watched the distant islands masking the North-West company post slowly clear in definition as his paterboru rode the liquid miles. Behind him, squatted on his heels, paddled the worried Pierre Migwan. In the stern, the thick arms of Omar

Trail of Cynicism in Poor Richard's Counsel

"Poor Richard" would find his words, even in these talkative times, in good standing for daily use and counsel. He himself would have honestly denied them to be profound or eloquent. He never claimed them to be original. Of his Almanack, he said: "These proverbs, which contained the wisdom of many ages and nations, I assembled and formed into a connected discourse." He preferred those which "inculcated industry and frugality as the means of procuring wealth, and thereby securing virtue, it being more difficult for a man in want to act always honestly."

This might be called cynical good sense, and Franklin himself was rarely required to live strictly by Poor Richard's doctrine. He was sufficient-

Tribute to Great Sailor

"Saluting the deck" is a custom instituted shortly after the death of Lord Nelson, greatest of British naval heroes. An officer regards the deck of any naval vessel as, theoretically, the deck on which Nelson died for his country.

Bolsvert, in unbroken cadence, pried the long paddle off his thigh. It had not been easy, the persuasion of Migwan, but the promise of absolute protection from Paradis and food for his family through the long snows, with a company job for his dog-team, had at last prevailed against his fears. As for Jim Stuart, his heart beat high with elation, for, after all, he was to see her again before she went south—again watch that intriguing smile break from the corners of her mobile mouth and her dusky eyes light with mockery. Should he have a chance to talk to her? After the episode with Paradis at the split rock, and from the nature of his mission to the post, it was unlikely, unless she saw them land and approach the trade-house.

And this smooth city man, MacLauren, was he after her as Omar warned him, or was it merely a business trip to his string of posts?

The paterboru finally slid between two islands and "Bonne Chance," as LeBlond called his fur post, lay before them, in a large clearing across a mile of strait. The two-story, white-washed trade and store-house was even larger than that at Lake Expance, while the number of cabins straggling along the shore indicated a large staff of company Indians.

Jim smiled stiffly at the thought of what Christie demanded of his own little trading station across the lake with his two aids, Omar and Esau, in competition with the resources of Louis LeBlond. Then the realization that within the hour, he might see, talk to her, drove his business worries from his mind.

The coming of the paterboru was drawing curious stragglers to the beach. Jim saw the door of the large trade-house open and two men appear, to stand, hands to faces, as if studying the strangers through binoculars. He turned to the men behind him. The face of the Indian was harried with fear. Omar grinned while his slits of eyes, buried between bushy brows and bulging cheekbones, glinted with the light of anticipation. That day he should see Louis LeBlond humbled, threatened with the coming of the Provincial police and his head man, with the sweat of fear on his face at the story Pierre should tell.

The canoe slid in to the beach to a chorus of yelps from the post sled dogs who were driven off by the company servants gathered to inspect the arrivals. Then LeBlond, accompanied by MacLauren, reached the beach.

"Good day, Mr. Stuart," said LeBlond coldly, glancing curiously at the Indian who pressed closely to the square bulk of Omar.

Stuart shook hands with the two men. "I have some business with you gentlemen," he said, "which will require the presence of my man and this Indian. Can we talk in the trade-room?"

"Of course," answered LeBlond, with a nod toward Pierre. "I know this man."

"Yes, but your man Paradis knows him better," added Jim drily. "Can we have Paradis present at this talk; he might wish to ask Migwan some questions?"

"Yes, if you want him," LeBlond looked quizzically at the speaker, then sent an Indian in search of Paradis.

"What's all the mystery, Stuart?" demanded MacLauren with a laugh. "Go in to accuse somebody of murder?"

"You're a good guesser, MacLauren," bit off Jim, and the glint in his gray eyes caused the partners to exchange surprised looks.

When they stood behind the closed door of the large trade-room, LeBlond asked: "Now, to what do we owe the honor of your call?"

"In law courts I believe the defendant is entitled to be confronted by his accuser. We'll wait for Paradis." Jim turned to the nervous Indian whose uneasy eyes alternately sought the faces of the white men and shifted appealingly to the wooden visage of Omar. "Now, Pierre, you're going to tell this story just as you told it to us. Paradis is not going to put a hand on you or bother you on the way to the canoe. If he tries it—"

The blood flamed into the dark face of LeBlond as he broke in: "You're pretty free with your talk here, Stuart!"

Jim's cold, gray gaze met the frown of the other. "You'll understand when you hear this story," he said quietly.

ly industrious, but not offensively so. His own wealth was not won by thrift and he lived frugally no longer than he could help it. Peat Still Popular

In many places in the British Isles peat is still exclusively used for heat. The custom of cutting the peat and drying it for use during the winter months still persists in the very northernmost part of Scotland, the county of Caithness. One of the features of a peat fire is the "lazy hole," so-called because its contents, the ashes which fall from the fire, need only be removed once a week. The last member of the family to retire at night removes the embers from the hearth to the "lazy hole," where they smolder among the ashes throughout the night. When morning comes, the embers are replaced on the hearth, and in the company of a fresh piece of peat soon break into a cheerful blaze.

Lesson for December 11

THE CHRISTIAN USE OF LEISURE

Nehemiah 8:9-18; Zechariah 8:4-5; Matthew 11:16-19; Mark 6:30-32; I Corinthians 10:23-33.

GOLDEN TEXT—Whether therefore ye eat, or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God. I Cor. 10:31.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Watching Children Play.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Pleasing God in Our Games.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Best Way to Rest and Play.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Christian's Rest and Recreation.

The topic of today's lesson is rather a strange one to attempt to set to the texts selected by the lesson committee. By leisure is meant freedom from one's regular occupation. The instructed Christian gladly uses his leisure in the worship and service of God.

I. Hearing the Word of God Read (Neh. 8:9-18).

The people turned aside from their common interests and demanded from Ezra, the scribe, the reading of God's word. The Mosaic economy provided regular periods for cessation from secular activities, such as the Sabbath, the Sabbath Year and the Year of Jubilee, so as to afford recreation and spiritual refreshment to the people. In the case of these Jews, this period of reading of the Word of God meant not only physical refreshment, but spiritual revival.

1. Conviction of sin (v. 9). "The word of God is quick and powerful" (Heb. 4:12). It brings conviction of sin (Acts 2:37).

2. Weeping turned into joy (vv. 10-12). Forgiveness follows perception and confession of sin. When the sinner is forgiven, God would have him enter into joy. Continued mourning would not atone for sins that are past. "The joy of the Lord is your strength."

3. Blessing to be shared with others (vv. 10-12). True joy manifests itself in giving to others. Pure religion goes out to minister to the poor (James 1:27).

4. Obedience of the people. From the reading of the Scriptures they found the Feast of Tabernacles had long been neglected. They kept the feast in a way that had not been known since the days of Joshua (v. 17).

11. Children Playing (Zech. 8:4-5). Playing is natural to children. Zechariah pictures a time when the streets of Jerusalem shall be safe for the play of children. This will be realized when Jesus Christ reigns as king.

111. The Need of a Vacation (Mark 6:30-32).

The tragic death of John the Baptist had taken place, and the disciples had just returned from a strenuous missionary tour. Christ perceived their need and invited them to come apart with him for a time of rest. It is a grave mistake to assume, because we are engaged in the Lord's work and the need is so urgent, that a vacation can be dispensed with. Such periods are needed in order that we may work again.

This retreat, called by Christ, was for the purpose of hearing a report of their work, to take counsel about the work, and to be refreshed by prayer.

IV. Do All Things for the Glory of God (I Cor. 10:23-33).

The occasion for this teaching was the uncertainty as to the right attitude toward things sacrificed unto idols. In mingling with society many perplexing questions arise such as, amusements, way of spending Sunday, way of spending a vacation, enjoyment of luxuries, etc. This portion of God's Word contains principles adequate for guidance in all of these matters.

1. "All things are lawful for me" (v. 23). This declaration is limited, of course, by things which are right in themselves. It is not true that a Christian is free to do things which are wrong in themselves. He can only indulge in lawful things as they are expedient and unto edification.

2. "Let no man seek his own" (v. 24). The Christian's law of life is unselfishness. The one dominated by love considers the other's interest rather than his own.

3. "Do all to the glory of God" (v. 31). This is the grand and supreme life of the Christian. In all our concerns we should have God's glory before us constantly. How could one ask God's blessing upon the intoxicating cup, dancing, gambling, theater going, Sunday desecration, etc.?

4. "Give no occasion for anyone to stumble" (v. 32). We should so live that no one can ever say that we have been the occasion for their downfall.

5. Follow the example of Jesus Christ (I Cor. 11:1). Christ gave up all for the sake of others.

He Is With Us

Wheresoever we be, whatsoever we are doing, in all our work, in our busy daily life, in all schemes and undertakings, in public trusts, and in private retreats, he is with us, and all we do is spread before him. Do it, then, as to the Lord.

Contrast

In the scientific and natural world, men obey no further than they understand; in the spiritual world they understand no further than they obey.

Treasure Trove
Some sixty gold and silver Spanish coins of more than a century ago were dug up at Biddeford, Maine, by Ralph Labbe and Ovila Bouthot. The two men were engaged in transplanting flowers when they came upon what they at first thought to be bits of iron covered with rust and hard earth. Some of the coins were taken to a Biddeford bank and while bank officials have not determined their actual value, it is believed that one identified as a Spanish dollar of 1805 is worth about $75.

Doris Coler, Charlotte Gorney, Lilian Hellmuth, Eleanor Hostert, Betty Marti, Ruth Lowe, Evelyn Meyers, Elaine Stanger, John Bertelsen, Roy Homering, Charles Burkhardt, Arthur Hurley, Edwin Lehnert, Melvin Nordsell, Jack Nordsell, Carl Schoeneck, Russel Bennett, Mary Marti, Marion Montgomery, Winona Reab, Marie Rinke, Irene Steinhagen, Pearl Werner, John Mueller, Edwin Wachter, Fremont Warning, Merton Livings, Lois Homering, Mary Ellen Schoen, Maxine Schoen, Margaret Stanger, Marvin Cappel, George Hentsch, Charles Hostert, Robert Krapp, Kenneth Warning, Harold Balaz, Arnold Bertelsen, Lenard Bertelsen, Fred Hentsch, Kurt Hellmuth, Howard Jungles, Roy Kohl, Robert Livings, Wilbert Lauffer, Elsworth McGovney, Warren Mancke, George Megarry, Marcus Monson, Russel Nelson, Jack Seggriff, David Tierney, Maxwell Williams, Harry Yunker, Virginia Brown, Fern Clevenger, Elsie Hellmuth, Dorothy Hall, Frieda Hentsch, Bernice Hostert, Laverne Krapp, Edna Lorenz, Blenda Monson, Viola Miskavitz, June Nielsen, June Schoeneck, Ada Semmler, Eileen Walsh, Grace Warning, Walter Miskavitz, Ethel Devlin, Edward Lauffer, Francis Rinke, Genevieve Pfleger, Lydia Baudry, Gertrude Sippel, Marie Bruhn, May Helmke, Edwin Yunker, Glen Knakmuhs, Erwin McGovney, Richard Erickson, Bernice Muehler, Harold Cappel, Wesley Cappel, Irene Nelson, Chester Ebert, Wesley Gieser, Michael MacPherson, Helen Madden, Russel Lauffer, Adeline Semmler, Andrew Lahmann, George Bruhn, Lucile Lauffer, Leona Jungles, Marie Tierney, Gerald Carey, Helen Cappel, Frances Megarry, Stanley Baudry, Gordon Benson, Stanley Brown, Kenneth Benson, Warren Coer, Gordon Clevenger, Arthur Hostert, Robert Homering, Walter Hentsch, Irvin Hentsch, Norman Williams, Edwin Schoeneck, Nick Hieman, Marvin Kohl, Marlys Krapp, Marjorie Marti, Hobart Meyers, Ludwig Mueller, Hyacinth Rinke, John Roessener, David Rabinov, George Rinke, Walter Spiess, Gordon Spiess, Thelma Schoen, Jean Shevlin, Violet Stanger, Edward Tierney, Gerald Bennett and Virginia Nebeker.

Three Mokena teams were defeated last Friday evening on their own court.

The Frankfort grade girls whipped the Mokena grade girls 11 to 4, the Frankfort grade boys trimmed the Mokena grade boys 32 to 3 and the Joliet heavyweight reserves overwhelmed the Mokena high school team 40 to 8. Wischover, Poulsen, and Krause were outstanding on the Frankfort grade girls team, Mitchell was the scoring ace on the Frankfort grade boys' team, while Bretz, Pederson, and Kohlhaugen stood out as high scorers for the Joliet heavies. The small and inexperienced Mokena teams were no match for their larger, powerful, and more experienced opponents.

Taxes and the Veteran

The National Economy League statement: "It is the object of this League to reduce our taxes, local, state and federal at least 25 per cent by organizing cities and congressional districts."

From this statement it would appear that the object of the League is the reduction of all forms of taxes, but this is contradicted by a statement appearing in a recent magazine, signed by the secretary, entitled "The Enemy Within the Gate" in which he stated definitely: "The only thing the League is interested in is the reduction of Veterans Benefits."

The appellation "Enemy Within Our Gates" is a surprising one for the veteran of America to face in view of a recent statement by Big Business that the veterans organizations particularly the American Legion is the most stabilizing force for good in the history of America.

In studying an analysis of tax costs, it must be borne in mind that veterans cost are a charge against federal government. Those who are attacking veterans expenditures, endeavor to create the impression that it is these veterans costs which have contributed so greatly to the huge increase in the cost of all general government in the United States, federal, state and local that the back of the little fellow "the people" is being broken by this tax load.

Statistics compiled as a result of the 1930 census, and just made public by the Department of Commerce, show that on April 1, 1930 there were 14,002,000 families in the United States that owned their homes, being 46 % of the total number of families including farms and city dwellers and the balance of over 15,000,000 families rent their homes or farms.

These 14,000,000 home owners know what property taxes are, for they have to pay in order to keep their homes from being taken over by the tax collector.

Even the 15,000,000 who rent their homes, know what property taxes mean for a part of their rent goes to pay the property tax on their rented homes.

It is these taxes the property taxes, which are paid to state and local governments, which have increased so rapidly during the last ten years. These taxes bear no relation to federal payments to disabled World War Veterans.

It is the income taxes which pay a portion of the expenses of the federal government, including the benefits paid to disabled veterans, and the small taxpayer does not pay income tax.

The average veteran living in the average small town, knows these facts to be the truth: 1-That few, if any, of his friends pay income tax to the federal government, much less pay large income tax. 2-That those of his friends who pay federal income tax can well afford to do so because they would not have to pay these taxes unless their incomes were of good size. They well know that if a person has a lean year financially, that the income tax is reduced or abolished accordingly, for it is paid only on the actual income received. 3-That a lean year does not alter the responsibility in any particular, for payment of property taxes to state and local governments, and 50 per cent of the tax payers are home owners. As a matter of fact the leaner the year has been for the individual property owner, the more likely he is to have his property taxes increased, rather than decreased.

The principal of a nation's obligation to its war veterans is a matter of precedent, but nevertheless is still open to debate. But if this obligation is to be met in the future as it has been in the past, why not let it remain as a federal obligation? Why allow the National Chamber of Commerce and The National Economy League to transfer this obligation from the Federal Treasury to the local treasury and in the end to the small taxpayer.

The principal of aid to unemployed citizens is being paid by a direct tax on real and personal property and will add millions of dollars to the tax bill of the small home owner. So while the propaganda of the Chamber-League combination cries for the welfare of the small taxpayer, its subtle, hidden reasons are revealed. And it proposes in reality: That expense of Veterans relief be cut to the bone; that the thousands of veterans who are getting relief from federal taxes (of which the income tax is an important factor) be thrown on the resources of the local government; that the local government will have thereby added to its present burden of unemployment relief, thousands of additional cases of veteran relief. That by this subtle propaganda the small taxpayer will assume the responsibility of the big taxpayer and the income taxes will be drastically reduced.

"The telephone is invaluable and especially so on the farm," is the opinion of one farm family which cites its case as an example. Formerly, they used the telephone of a relative, to whose farm they traveled through all kinds of weather and at all hours. Often they made unnecessary trips to town nine miles away. Now, with a telephone of their own, they are saved not only all this trouble and wasted time, but money too. Many farm families have found that it costs less to have a telephone than to be without one. Order today from our Business Office.

PUBLIC SERVICE COMPANY OF NORTHERN ILLINOIS

About the Public Service Company:

Several outstanding facts about this Company probably are not as well understood as I think they should be.

(1) It is purely an operating company and is not owned or controlled by any other company. (2) The majority of its stockholders live right here—it is "home owned". (3) All of its officers and employees live here. (4) Its future is irrevocably dependent upon the growth and prosperity of northern Illinois.

"And Departing, Leave Behind Them—"

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

IT IS easy enough to account for the erection of private memorials to private citizens in the form of markers over their graves and for the statues, monuments and other memorials with which we honor our statesmen, military and naval leaders and other heroes. But how shall we account for some of the strange memorials which, through the ages, have been set up by human hands and which man continues to set up to a great variety of things, both animate and inanimate. To give a complete catalogue of them would require no less space than a book, but for an idea of their variety consider some of these:

Perhaps as queer an assemblage of monuments as can be found in any one place on earth is to be seen in a cemetery at Mayfield, Ky., where a burial plot contains life-size statues of the dead members of one family, dressed in the fashions of their times, and the figures of various animals, among them a deer, which were the pets of the various generations of the family and were buried beside their masters.

Ordinarily you wouldn't think that cheese would be an appropriate object for a memorial, yet there is one. It stands near the little city of Vimoutiers in France on the farm of a certain Beau Moncel, where during the latter half of the eighteenth century lived Marie Harel, who is credited with being the inventor of Camembert cheese. Not only is the fame of this Norman milkmaid commemorated by this stone shaft on the farm where she worked, but in Main Place in the city of Vimoutiers itself is a statue of her, back of which is a stone bas-relief showing the farmhouse on the Marcel farm where she was born in 1761, where she lived until her death in 1817 and where she made the new kind of cheese now famous the world over.

These monuments were erected through the efforts of a New York doctor, Joseph Knrim. For many years he conducted a sanatorium in New York, where the only medicine he gave his patients for all kinds of stomach ailments was Pilsener beer and Camembert cheese. Because of his gratitude to the inventor of the cheese with which he made so many people well and saved their lives, he made a romantic pilgrimage to Vimoutiers a year or so ago, and the result was this most unusual of all monuments.

It was only a year or so ago that news dispatches carried the following story:

San Jose, Calif.—A movement is in progress here to erect a monument to the memory of Louis Peller, who, 75 years ago, started the prune industry in America.

Peller came to California during the famous gold rush of 1849. Away from his sunny France, he missed the plums from his home locality near Bordeaux, and wrote back for seeds and cuttings, and searched the hills for roots of wild species on which his scions could be grafted. So interested did he become, he gave up his quest for gold and gave the world the prune, beginning what is now a billion dollar industry.

From another part of the West at about the same time came this news story:

Fair Play, Colo.—Prunes, a burro, will have a monument. Shot last month when he became too feeble to eat after serving nearly every mine in the region of Fair Play, he will have a memorial of samples of ore taken from all the mines in which he worked.

Up in Alaska several years ago a bronze plaque, bearing a bas-relief of a mule and a horse, was dedicated by the Ladies of the Golden North, an auxiliary of the Alaska-Yukon Pioneers, to perpetuate the memory of the faithful pack animals, both mules and horses, who lost their lives on the White Pass trail during the Klondike gold rush days. With Gov. George A. Parks of Alaska and George Black, member of the Canadian parliament from Yukon territory, officiating, the dedication took place near Inspiration point above the famous Dead Horse gulch.

If you want to see how other members of the equine world have been honored, go down to Lexington, Ky., and drive out along the Winchester pike until you come to Hamburg Place, the farm of J. E. Madden. Nestling in a little grove of trees on this farm is what is thought to be the only cemetery for horse celebrities in the world. Dominating the grassy plot of ground of less than an acre and enclosed by a stone wall stands a statue of a horse. Upon the foundation on which the statue stands is this inscription, "Nancy Hanks 2:04." For this is the last resting place of the world champion trotter from 1892 to 1894.

Even more traditional than love of man for

1. Monument erected to the memory of thousands of carrier pigeons killed during the World war which was unveiled in Brussels, Belgium, by the Duke of Brabant, son of the King of the Belgians.

2. Monument over the grave of George W. Pike near Douglas, Wyo.

3. A burial plot in a cemetery at Mayfield, Ky., containing life-size statues of the dead in the fashions of their times and figures of animals which were pets of various generations of the family and which were buried beside their masters.

4. Monument erected in Berlin, Germany, in appreciation of the invaluable services which the horse gave to the German army during the World war.

5. Monument to Camembert cheese near the city of Vimoutiers in the Camembert district of Normandy, France.

6. Monument erected to Segis Pietertje Prospect, world's record milk-producing cow, near Seattle, Wash.

his horse is his love for his dog. So it is not surprising that in various parts of the world may be found monuments to "man's best friend." Visitors to Newstead abbey in Nottingham, England, are certain to be shown Lord Byron's monument to his dog Boatswain. Boatswain was a Newfoundland of affectionate disposition whose death left the great poet inconsolable. The dog was buried not 50 feet from the corner of the abbey where he used to sit on sunny days and where his master used to romp with him. His grave is marked by a shaft of brick and marble surmounted by an urn. The pedestal is a series of steps. On a tablet are inscribed the words: "Near this spot are deposited the remains of one who possessed beauty without vanity, strength without insolence, courage without ferocity, and all the virtues of man, without his vices. This praise, which would be unmeaning flattery if inscribed over human ashes, is but a just tribute to the memory of Boatswain, A Dog."

It is not especially unusual, perhaps, for man to erect monuments to his two best friends, the horse and the dog, but it is unusual for him to erect a monument to a cow. For that reason the statue of Segis Pietertje Prospect, a Holstein cow, which stands over her grave on the banks of the Snoqualmie river near Seattle, Wash., is unique among memorials. The reason for this honor is explained by the inscription on the bronze tablet at the base of the statue. It reads as follows:

"Here lived and gave her service to mankind Segis Pietertje Prospect, world's champion milk cow. Born 1913, died 1925. Twice she registered production records that set her fame above all dairy cattle of any age. In each of two years she exceeded 16,500 quarts of milk, 1,400 pounds of butter, yielding for the two a total of 33,922 quarts of milk, 2,865.18 pounds of butter. Sired by a king and of purest Holstein strain, she herself bore sons and daughters of champion achievement. Finest type of the noble, patient animal that is most justly named 'The Foster Mother of the Human Race,' her queenly worth deserved the gratitude in which this tribute is erected by her owner, Carnation Milk Farms, 1928."

In Salt Lake City, Utah, stands a lofty granite column, on top of which is a large granite ball upon which two bronze birds, covered with gold leaf are gently alighting. On the four sides of the base are bronze tablets, three bearing bas-relief scenes of pioneer days in the Salt Lake valley. One shows the beginning of agriculture in the arid West—a pioneer and his family and a yoke of oxen at work reclaiming the desert soil. The second shows the wheat fields overrun by crickets. The pioneer man sits with bowed head, on his face a look of helplessness and grief. But the pioneer woman is lifting up her face to the skies as she sees a miracle about to take place. Winged over the mountains into the valley come a great flock of gulls. The third bronze shows the harvest days. The gulls have devoured the crickets, the crops are saved and the pioneers in the wilderness will have bread. On the fourth tablet are these words: "Sea Gull Monument. Erected in grateful remembrance of the mercy of God to the Mormon pioneers." Thus this monument is an everlasting story in stone of one of the most beautiful and dramatic incidents in American history—the story of how the gulls saved the wheat fields of Utah in 1848.

This brief catalogue of unusual monuments would not be complete without reference to unusual memorials to two men—not great men, perhaps, and certainly not especially good men—in fact, two pretty bad men, judged by most human standards. Carved on an Alaskan cliff is a huge human skull which recalls the fame of "Soapy" Smith, gambler, gunfighter and general "bad man" of the Klondike gold days, who died as he had lived—by the gun. So today an ironic skull on a jagged mountainside is Smith's salute to latter-day pilgrims journeying north by the inside water route to Alaska. The skull 25 feet high by 9 feet wide, with missing teeth and leering smile, was carved by order of the "Arctic Brotherhood" as a warning to other bad men.

Some day when you're motoring through Douglas, Wyo., pay a visit to the little cemetery on the hill east of that city and take a look at a large granite gravestone upon which is engraved this unusual epitaph:

GEORGE W. PIKE

Underneath this stone in eternal rest Sleeps the wildest one of the wayward west. He was a gambler and sport and cowboy too And he led the pace in an outlaw crew. He was sure on the trigger and staid to the end But he never was known to quit on a friend. In the relations of death all mankind is alike But in life there was only one George W. Pike.

Perhaps it's just as well that "there was only one George W. Pike" for Malcolm Campbell, a famous old-time sheriff of Wyoming, is authority for the statement that Pike's "remarkable record for horse-stealing extended over a period of 15 years during which time there were few terms of court that he was not down for at least two counts . . . but he was never convicted of a crime in his life."!

Weather to Order, Plan of Russian Scientists

The Russians have decided to make their own weather. So optimistic are they that an artificial rain institute has been started at Moscow, and others are to follow. Russia is largely dependent upon the crops grown on the farms, and scientists state that presently they will be able to plant out a regular scheme of fine weather and of rain occurring at just the right times. Experiments made by means of planes and powerful ground transmitting stations have shown that much can be done in the way of bringing down rain by means of powerful high-tension currents. It has also been possible to break up hailstorms by bombarding them with great bell-mouthed cannon firing blank charges. When the approach of a hailstorm is signaled by telephone the gunners are called to their stations and every effort is made to cause the hail to fall in districts where it will do the least damage. The vibrations set up by the bell-mouthed cannon frequently bring down the hail and prevent it from traveling to places where it might do damage.

What Can You Do For The Pains Of Rheumatism?

Pain Ended In Few Minutes, This Way

It has now been discovered by thousands of rheumatic sufferers that the pains of that distressing disorder can be eased in as little as a few minutes . . . relief and comfort in almost as little time as it takes to tell!

Doctors advise two tablets of Bayer Aspirin taken with a full glass of water. Then a rest of a few minutes . . . and that is all. Pain is eased quickly—sometimes almost unbelievably.

Relief comes so fast because of the peculiar quick-dissolving property of Genuine Bayer Aspirin. The tablets you take dissolve almost INSTANTLY in your stomach. And thus you get practically instant relief. The fastest, safe relief—it is said.

BROADCAST FEATURES

"Mountains of the Moon"

A trip into that mysterious section of equatorial Africa where the snow-capped Ruwenzori or "Mountains of the Moon" hide behind eternal mists will be the subject of Carvelly Wells' next Continental Oil Company broadcast Wednesday night, December 14 at 9:30 o'clock Central Standard Time over a network of 23 NBC stations.

Up until 1928 when Wells headed the Massee expedition of the Chicago Geographical Society to the Mountains of the Moon, on the borderline between the Belgian Congo and British Uganda, the popular conception of this unusual region was decidedly hazy. Wells found he had stepped into a land of freaks, where ordinary garden plants grow into veritable giants, where no people live and where it is necessary to wear sun helmets, spine pads and Arctic footgear at the same time.

Radio fans in this section may tune in on this program on station WMAQ Wednesday night at 9:30 o'clock.

THE SEASON'S GREETINGS

Well here's the end of thirty-two, This cherry greeting we extend to you;
For when we started this year We weren't so sure we'd still be here.

But still we're here and going strong And now we say it won't be so long,
Before the dawn of that longed for day, When all may have the wherewith to pay.

When twenty-eight was fading out, We now perceive without a doubt Prosperity's return to our very door, Must then require some four years more.

As four past years have faded out, We have faced a future full of doubt;
We've recleaned our clothes and patched our shoes, These tasks have helped to bump the blues.

We hoarded nickels, cents and dimes We found ourselves up against "hard times".
We couldn't afford to buy a solitary thing; We'd reached the limit of our string.

We said we can't buy bread and we can't pay the rent,
Our only hope for shelter is in a tent; Our sight is dim, we need specks, But the banks are so we can't write checks.

And so we have gone from day to day, With our minds befuddled so to say,

So we have gone without having things done, Because we were so hopelessly out of mon.

Now the sun it rises day by day For the universe is tuned that way So the darkness of the darkest night, Is dispelled in time as is our fright

Earth's component parts though great or small Must ever obey a universal law, And the change of the times as the change of seasons

Must ever recur if we consult our reason.
—By Dr. Clarence A. Hercules, Harvey, Illinois.

Facts About the Telephone

The first telephones in Ethiopia were introduced in 1896, and were installed by Italian prisoners captured at the Battle of Adowa.

Statistics of the 1930 farm census, recently released by the Department of Commerce, show that Iowa outranks every other state in the number of telephones on farms.

A net increase of 10,800 telephones in Washington, D. C., took place in 1931, as compared with a gain of 9,600 in 1930. At the beginning of 1932, Washington was served by some 179,000 telephones.

The New York Telephone Company spent about $85,000,000 during 1931 in New York State on its construction and improvement program. This figure exceeds the annual average spent for these purposes in the state for the last five years, the five-year total amounting to about $417,000,000.

The first telephone exchange in Siam was established at Bangkok, the capital of the country, in 1886. This was replaced twenty years later with a common battery two-wire system which is still in operation. A modern and more efficient telephone system, however, is now being installed, new exchanges are being built, and work is under way for the laying of a complete new underground cable system.

Steamer Baskets

THE great steamers laden with passengers are drawing away from the docks, and the latter are looking forward eagerly to the art and old time architecture, the unusual foods and quaint customs, the foreign languages and lovely landscapes which are awaiting them on the other side. For things are not looking so badly, after all, and it has turned out that almost as many tourists as usual are leaving our shores.

But some people who formerly went first class are now traveling tourist third where the food is very good but not so varied as that to which they were accustomed on previous trips. So this is the year of all others to supplement their menus with a carefully chosen steamer basket which will make their crossing a success.

For that sweet tooth put in fruit cake, figs, cookies, candies and pineapple, jellies, jams and perhaps some orange or grapefruit juice to help breakfast along. These all have the advantage of being obtainable in cans so that those which are not used going over can be kept and consumed on the return trip.

If there are children along, cans of apple butter or applesauce and some tins of fine crisp crackers should be included. Be sure, also, to put in some of the new canned sandwich spreads—ham, tongue, liver and mixed meats—and cans of anchovy paste, deviled ham and potted meats. And a few cans of tomato juice, which retains all its popularity, would be a most thoughtful and welcome surprise.
